Bommilingam village which is the main village & attached to this is the Chenchu Colony

THE GEOGRAPHY

Bommilingam is a small hamlet Village in Ardhaveedu Mandal in Prakasam District of Andhra Pradesh State, India. It comes under Velagalapaya Panchayath. It is located 142 KM towards west from District headquarters Ongole, and around 16 KM from Ardhaveedu, the mandal headquarters.

DEMOGRAPHICS OF BOMMILINGAM PALLI and CHENCHU COLONY

Total population of Bommilingam is 1965 it also has got a Chenchu colony connected to the village. The total population of Bommilingam, including the Chenchu Colony is 1065 which includes 991 men and 974 women residing in 394 Houses. Total area of Bommilingam is 3489 hectares.

THE LIVING STYLE AND THE PRESENT PROBLEM

The people living in this Chenchu Colony are the nomadic tribal communities. The word Chenchu is assigned to the communities who live in the forests, and depend on the occupation of extracting forest produce and making a livelihood by selling the produce. The major occupation of the population of Chenchu Colony is the same in this colony also. As the village and colony are located very interior to the main road, and do not have any public transport, the government sponsored schemes are not reaching them as per the norms.

THE PROBLEM

Having come to know that about 45 Chenchu families living in this Colony are living under very hard and harsh conditions, Chaitanya Kala Bharathi visited this village and the colony. We have met all the 45 families and discussed with them about the problems they are facing.

It was understood that they are not accessing any of the government schemes as they do not have any identity card issued by the government. Furthermore, it is understood that their colony has no water supply – there are no piped water supply or any drinking water bores in the Chenchu colony. For fetching water, they have to go to the agricultural fields of the farmers when they switch on the motors to irrigate their lands. They have to walk longer distances every day to fetch water for use as drinking water and also for cooking and other general purposes.

There is no medical facility for them, and even for small health issue they have to travel a longer-distances. They do not have regular bus facility; therefore, people hardly prefer to go to hospitals, and depend on the forest herbs or local quacks.

The most pathetic information that Chaitanya Kala Bharath come across is that for the past few months, they are not in a position to find any livelihood activity. As a result of this, they are feeding themselves and their children on a kind of resin (gum) extracted from the Babool tree (Acacia nilotica). They mix it with water, boil it and are taking as their one-time food. As a result several children and many elders have developed severe health problems.

THE PROBLEM

Coming to know this, Chaitanya Kala Bharathi, has immediately made arrangements to support these families, with minimum essential kitchen items, so that they can have food for families. As a part of this support, a package of dry ration items was prepared for distribution among the 45 chenchu families living in this colony.

For them, this support was of great help as they can give them children good food for a week or more. They were so thankful to SAMDASANI Foundation and Chaitanya Kala Bharathi, for extending this humanitarian support to their families.

Items in the Package

Rice	4.5 Kgs
Red gram	1 kg
Cooking oil	1 Litre
Finger Millet flour	1 kg
Jaggery	1 Kg
Mirchi powder	500 grams
Turmeric powder	500 grams

REQUEST FROM THE COMMUNITIES

The Chenchu Colony communities have requested Chaitanya Kala Bharathi to:

- Provide them with water facility by digging a bore well in the Colony. This will give them the relief from going long distances (into the agricultural fields) and fetch water only during the time when the farmers switch on the agricultural motors.
- They also requested to construct a water tank to pump the water from the bore so that the people of the colony can fetch water when required.
- It also helps them to get clean water when compared to the muddy / murky water they are getting from the irrigation bores.
- A request was also come from them to help their children to get a chance to continue their education by supplying them study material and reference material.

Chaitanya Kala Bharathi (CKB) takes this opportunity to thank Samdasani Foundation for the support they have extended to CKB to serve these very needy people.
