Chaitanya Kala Bharathi expresses its deepest gratitude to The Shamdasani Foundation, Hong Kong, for their generous contribution of ₹10,000. This grant enabled CKB to provide essential need-based support to vulnerable nomadic families residing in Kaja village of Muvva Mandal in Krishna District.

The Target Community: Preserving a Fading Tradition

The identified group consists of 12 families (approximately 40 members, including children) who lead a nomadic lifestyle. Traditionally, these families are the custodians of a unique cultural practice during Sankranti, the festival of harvest.

- The Tradition: Adorning cows with colourful ribbons and playing traditional music, they visit farming households to offer blessings and to collect their charity of food grains or money.

- The Struggle: Historically, farmers donated enough food-grain during harvest to sustain these families for an entire year. However, due to shifting economic conditions and the declining status of farming, these families now struggle to gather even a week's worth of food.

Current Reality: With the traditional support system fading, these families have been forced into daily house-to-house begging to survive.

Our Intervention

Recognizing the immediate nutritional and household needs of these 12 families, CKB utilized the foundation's support to provide Essential Kitchen Kits.

Kit Composition: Each of the 12 families received a comprehensive kit containing 9 different essential kitchen items to improve their daily living conditions and food security.

Impact and Gratitude

This timely intervention provided more than just material goods; it provided dignity and relief to a community that often falls through the cracks of mainstream social schemes.

On behalf of the 40 beneficiaries in Kaja village, CKB extends a heartfelt thank you to the team at The Shamdasani Foundation. Your kindness has directly improved the lives of these wandering families.
